Too often, students taught "long and short" vowels and the student has no idea what to call words like: cable, far, bird, taller, dirty. reading or basal texts will often offer individual lessons ratherSystematic instructions in the use of the vowels controlled by R. Word construction activities will help support students to recognize word models, such as changing the first letter or letters in the vowels controlled by R, that is to change the car into a distant and distant jar, etc. listening to the sound initial. That's why we have to focus on 44 sounds in spelling instead of only consonant sounds and long and short vocal sounds, which is what teaching spelling is really everything. Here is a sample of words of a big word study to use to help students learn the models and anomalies of some of the vowels controlled by R. Word Building: using individual letter cards and small personal pocket graphics, they have students build r controlled words From the list below, shaping the first word and then dictating the next words, for examples: more, store, pore, core - bark, park, lark, Stark, etc. Word order: This is a good activity for controlled sounds R that can be made in different ways, such as or in Oar, shop, floor, door, etc. Stupid. Poems: give students a series of words to R controlled and make them write stupid poems of rhyme, like: heart, intelligent, graphic, part, beginning, Jim made a picture of a heart and put it in the classroom folder. Oh, please don't get started. Jim thinks of being so lucky! You can print the word cards below and have physically sort students by putting velcro or magnets on the back of words to order. You could even use families of words that are already prepared, which involve cutting words and paste them into the correct column. Making the word order in small groups, or make it a business in a reading center that two or three children can complete together.
