So, this was the instruction for the iPhone users on How to record on the Snapchat without hands. Now for many Android users, let's discuss how you record in the Snapchat without hands on Android. Please continue reading our next part. Throw your hands in the air and Wave with them as you simply do not care ... As Snapchat is now silently testing a hands-free mode. The more Recent Snapchat Beta (Version 10.27.0.18) allows users to occupy up to 60 seconds of video without having to hold the registry button during the duration of the recording. To activate the feature, users press the registry button, then drag down and simply release. Snapchat will still break signs in 10-second clips, a feature that is currently available for any duration of duration than 10 seconds. The update does not appear in the Snapchat Notes app for beta users, but a prompt is shown when a user registers a video according to a member of the Beta Snapchat program, which spoke to Mashable the condition of anonymity. Here is free hands mode, it seems: the snapchat prompt to use hands-free mode. Crédito: Screenshot / Snapchat screen after taking 60 seconds video-free-free. Créda: Screenshot / Snapchat This new handsome hands mode is yet another Snapchat decision that moves away from how the application was originally worked. Users of Snapchat previously had to hold a button on their smartphone screens to display snaps and stories, to an application update in July 2015. But the users of the Snapchat begged for a Free hand functionality for years, and also is something that the histories of the Instagram competitor of Snapchat currently offers. This update will finally give people more freedom when they are filming Veho. For example, gadget reviewers can now show any device that are holding more easily. Currently, there are some solutions that people use, but a two-handed twitter search for "Snapchat Hands Free" reveals that many are still begging for the use to be added. Tweet may have been deleted Tweet may have been deleted Tweet may have been excluded beside the launch of the beta program, the snapchat also silently introduced a camera air whole body for the official version of the application (10.26.1.0). It is an update for the World Lens feature, where users can use augmented reality to add digital animations to their surroundings. Now the Tracks the movement of items in front of the camera. For example, a current snapchat lens from a storm cloud asks users to look for a human body to put an air cloud above. When Snapchat's camera identifies the body, put the cloud above the person and also follow them as they move. Here is an example: Previously, the world's Snapchat lenses can move and change as the user moves, making them slightly interactive. But Snap has worked more in image recognition and video in the real world. In November, Snapchat silently introduced new filters that recognized which users were taking and provided contextual or adhesive edge. As SNAP continues to face the competition of the Instagram of the Social Facebook and new participants, these updates are fundamental to keep the application fun and worth it for users. The redesign, launched at this year's beginning, was not welcomed well from still loyal snapchat users such as Celebrity Kylie Jenner. CEO Snap Evan Spiegel said the company's priorities for 2018 are the growth of the user, the contest and augmented reality - all of these updates are achieved.
