All URCs do not contain all possible codes. If muted, as you know there will be no audio output. Surf the site with patience. Please accept this solution and do rate it as FixYa if found useful. Thanks Rylee You need to call your phone service company, they can retrieve the puk code from a database for free. In your case you need to contact ASDA technical support to unlock the SIM. The PIN and PUK are related to the SIM card, not to the phone. If you replace the SIM card with a different one, then the phone should not ask for the PUK anymore. Also tried ROKU on HDMI2 and got picture, but when starting a show, screen goes pink but audio is fine. Hey, so I have an issue with a Samsung tv un55ru7100fxza. It has this clicking sound and it's in a cycle of turning off and on, you can see the startup logo for just a second before it turns off and on again. Next step is to take out each individual capacitor and test them which I really don't want to do at all but I need to find the issue. I tried plugging in different boards to see if a particular board was causing it and I noticed that when I unplug the t con board the clicking stops and the tv stays on and I can manually turn it off, then I try and keep the t con board in and just unplug the 2 connectors that goes into the panel and the clicking continues, I feel like I need to replace the t con board but when I look up the symptoms of a t con board failing the tv just has fading or color distortions which I don't have. <http://www.bearlakecondo.net/userfiles/corona-four-typewriter-manual.xml>

So I'm kinda confused on why it would only click when that board is plugged in, if it was capacitor or power board issue wouldn't the power board be clicking even if everything was unplugged. Awhile ago it's done this but only for about 3 min then it worked fine and even for a week or two, but now it's always doing it. I don't know what to do since everyone I contacted wants hundreds of dollars to fix it. Is there anything else I can try What is the fault and what should I do. Thank you. CABOT AURORA BASED SYSTEMS This is the system typically known from the Vestel devices, some screen shots of which can be found here. A number of newer boxes come with updated versions of this interface. Although the Vestels are all reported to support 149 I do not know if any of these do. Could this indicate indicate 149 a poster here suggests not. UNKNOWN SYSTEMS These are some other freeview boxes I have seen available, with miscellaneous systems different to the above three categories. Menus look nice and are well laid out, although the usability does leave a little to be desired. So there you have it, I can confirm the Philips DTR230 or the Goodmans GDR11 both support a 149 aspect ratio.sleep The one I have is the Techica STBHDTV2010 bought for 25 from Tesco Outlet. The Goodmans GDR11 looks to be a good economical solution for users who need the 149 ratio. It even has twin scart sockets!

The Goodmans GDR11 looks to be a good economical solution for users who need the 149 ratio. It even has twin scart sockets! The GDR11 does have other features though not found even on some expensive boxes such as RF modulator, Audio Descriptive Service and builtin power supply. Id recommend it for someone using an older TV setup either as their main livingroom set or as a second set in a kitchen or bedroom. The GDR11 does have other features though not found even on some expensive boxes such as RF modulator, Audio Descriptive Service and builtin power supply. Id recommend it for someone using an older TV setup either as their main livingroom set or as a second set in a kitchen or bedroom. To be honest Im only using GDR11 while my Pioneer STB is being upgraded to handle postDSO signals, then it will be relegated for use with an old TV in a back bedroom where its shortcomings wont be noticed.
