We will be happy to assist you with any questions you may have. Something went wrong. With the right accessories, you can also make your wheelchair more comfortable. Unless you are improving visual safety for a roadready mobility scooter, these do not have to be roadsafe recommended. Instead, consider the more costeffective and pavementvisible Catherine wheel effect of lights added to your wheels. You can also add them to the external surface of the backrest, as well as to any frontpanel or side surface for added visibility in low light conditions. Wheelchair users are often overlooked by pedestrians as they are scanning at a standing headheight rather than a seated level. Additionally, there is plenty to distract a pedestrian on the highstreet. By making your wheelchair hard to ignore with lights, colours, or even a horn, you can improve your safety in public places. There are several joystick controller variants, including those with prominent knobs for users with restricted arm and hand flexibility. You can also find clamps and straps for securing an electric wheelchair safely in a car or van. Castor wheels, front wheels, tires, and rearwheel replacements can be found, as well as batteries designed for specific models.

To ensure compatibility, check the manufacturers website for full details before purchase. If you prefer not to wear gloves, or want the added grip, handrim covers come in a choice of textures. Most commonly rubberised products that stretch into place, they are easy to change to suit the season. Memory foam seat pads will relieve pressure and accommodate individual sitting styles. Available as swingaway models or with added padding, not all rests fit all wheelchair models, so ensure compatibility before purchase. Additionally, each wheelchair part may have a slightly different procedure, so refer to the manufacturers instructions before fitting.
