Do I Need An Appointment You will need a completed application form available at the offices or online, appropriate documentation of identity and residency, proof of registration and insurance for applicants who own their own vehicles, and the appropriate fees. You will also be required to pass the knowledge written, vision, and driving tests before a driver license will be issued. If you are under eighteen, you will need to work your way through Texas' system of graduated, provisional licensing for minors. You may obtain your initial instruction permit at age 15, and can move up to a graduated license after at least six months with your permit. To apply for a driver license, you will need one item from the primary identity documents OR two items from the secondary identity documents OR one item from the secondary identity documents and two from the supporting identity documents. Secondary identity documents include an original or certified copy of your birth certificate. Supporting identity documents include a W2 or 1099 form, a social security card, school or military records, a marriage license or divorce decree, a voter registration card, immunization records, and selective service cards. You will have to pass both the knowledge and vision test before a driving test can be administered. If you have a driver license from another state, you will not be required to take the knowledge and driving tests—however, this does not include applicants under the age of 18.

There are several options for completing this requirement, including education through a public school, a driver training school, or through parent-taught driver's education. For those under 18, driver's education must include behind-the-wheel instruction and should be at least 32 hours long. Adult driver's education requires only six hours and has no behind-the-wheel requirements. With an instruction permit you will not be allowed to drive alone—you must have a driver 21 years of age with at least one year of driving experience in the vehicle with you at all times. For the driving portion of your test there aren't any questions per se; instead, this test utilizes a point system. For your driving test you must complete the exam with fewer than 30 points deducted from your final score. The driving test awards points based on four primary categories—control your ability to make the vehicle do what you mean for it to do, observation your ability to be aware of what's going on around you, positioning your ability to stay in the correct lane, and signaling your ability to correctly use turn signals. If you fail the test all three times or exceed your 90 day limit you will be required to pay another application fee before you can be tested again. This guide contains important information about Texas driving laws as well as information about the format of the test. Once you have successfully completed the knowledge test, you can practice driving for the driving test under the supervision of a licensed driver. Enrolling in a driver's education program is another great way to prepare even if you are not required to do so by law. As mentioned earlier, these fees will allow you three attempts to pass the test within a 90 day period.

If you have not graduated high school, you must provide proof that you have been enrolled in school public, private, or home for at least the last 80 days or you must provide proof that you have been enrolled in a high school diploma equivalency program for at least the last 45 days. The more you drive, the more confident you'll feel during your test. If you practice these behaviors, they'll come second nature when you take your exam. Ultimately, they can make the difference between passing and failing the driving test. This way, you can be sure to practice your weaker skills before your test and you can go into the exam a little more relaxed. The test is 20 minutes long and it covers many basic driving skills. Heres a rundown of what you should expect. You'll need to demonstrate that the car you're using has a variety of safety features, including two license plates, a working horn, and safety belts. For example, you may be asked to turn on the lights or windshield wipers. Be sure to use your signals, check your mirrors, stop smoothly, and obey all traffic laws. Plus, be sure to get plenty of behind the wheel practice. After that, you should be ready to hit the road. While the prospect of taking the test may make you nervous, stay calm. The more you know about what to expect, the better prepared you'll be to pass. We've outlined the process below to give you an overview of how the testing will be. How the Test Works The road portion of the Texas driving test is always conducted with the student in the driver seat and a Department of Public Safety customer service representative CSR in the passenger seat. He or she will evaluate your driving skills and ask you to perform specific driving tasks more information below on this.

As soon as your test is over, your CSR will explain any mistakes you may have made, including tips on what you could or should have done. He or she will let you know if you've passed or failed — and if you have not successfully passed, your CSR will explain the retesting process. Vehicle Inspection The test will officially begin with the CSR looking over the vehicle you will take your test in. You must provide your own vehicle. The CSR will make sure it's legal and that it has passed an inspection. Taking the Road Test Here are some guidelines to follow for the driving portion of the test. Be sure to follow all the instructions given by your CSR. Remember that he or she will not ask you to do anything illegal. And don't carry on a conversation with your CSR during the test — it's an official examination and he or she will be too busy evaluating you to talk. What You'll Be Evaluated On During testing, all drivers are evaluated on four basic skills Control — Being able to make the car do what you're trying to make it do. Observation — Being able to view and respond to what other traffic is doing, particularly where problems might come into play. Positioning — Staying in your lane. Signaling — Always using your turn signals properly. In addition to these four basics, there are many other areas your CSR will expect you to be proficient in, including these Parallel parking Stopping quickly, where you are asked to stop your car as quickly as possible from a speed of around 20 mph, without causing the tires to skid Backing, where you are asked to drive the car in reverse for about 15 feet as straight and smoothly as possible — Be sure to go slowly and look out the rear windshield the entire time by physically turning your head Obeying all traffic signs, particularly stop signs. Remember to come to a complete stop; do not roll through Obeying all traffic signals Using the clutch.
