I hooked it up, and the DVD didnt workBUT THAT IS ON ME!! I tried a blue ray without thinking. I put a regular DVD in, and BAM. Great EVERYTHING! I used a VHS cassette adapter to play our many home camcorder videos, and had a blast watching my girls grow upagain! LOL. SADLY, no remote! But I programmed a universal, and I can stay on the couch and enjoy!. Thank you for being an honorable seller!New combos are expensive, if you can still find them. The DVD stopped working a couple of months after purchase, but as long as the VCR works, Im happy. I bought it mainly for the VCR. Im satisfied.We had to order a remote on line because we could not find a remote in a store that had VCR control. The universal remotes do not open the DVD or eject the VCR. A well lit area is needed to see the players functions on the front.No advance warning was given that there would be no remote control included. Also, the connectivity was not clear, as in, what cable options are there to connect my satellite receiver and TV. What recourse do I have as a customer. Can you ship me a working remote control. Buyers, look into these things before you order!We are happy with it and would recommend this seller. Thank you.The available Coaxial, Composite video, Svideo connection options are typical. Any suggestins God bless you The squares you mention are pixels, the picture pixelates and breaks up, then freezes caused by voltage changes in the laser and the motor speed.

Being as this is not a DVD recorder, it is probably not economical to repair. If that does not solve the issue, sadly, you would be reduced to just the VCR part or you could purchase a new player since the cost of such would be cheaper than repairs to this assuming parts were available. Not the best news, but you can try the simple inhome cleaning of the unit first before taking any further action. To remedy this you need to set the dvd player to use another frequency channel. To do this there may be a small switch on the back of the unit or you may have to do it through the players programming menu where you would look for something like output channel select. I hope this helps Ive replaced the backlight inverter and it did not resolve the problem. Any help is greatly appreciated! Thank you, Lance Gatewood The lets try changing this method of television repair never works. You need the test equipment and knowledge at component level. Take it to an engineer, it is much cheaper. If your TV is under warranty, I suggest to contact the manufacturer for a repair or replacement. This device has a bn950085A T Con board. I was wondering whether there are other options The screen does not turn on anymore. There is power going to the TV indicated by the red power light. Once in a while if I let the TV sit for 24 hours when I go to use the power button on the back of the TV I will get a smart TV flash across the screen and then it goes black. Remote does not work either. I was able to take the back panel off and look at the boards and it does not look like there are any bad capacitors or loose connections or anything else all solder points appear intact, no budding capacitors or leaks that I can tell. I am by no means even an amateur electronic person but from Google and YouTube I was able to get this information. Thanks in advance! Many try repairing by replacing circuit boards and often spend more than they would pay a repairer. The disk is recorded from an original.

Can you help Any clue on what I can do to fix this problem I really appreciate your help! Allen Jun 11, 2015 The picture is no longer working properly. When I turn the tv on, there is a faint grey picture in direct sunlight. Ive attempted unplugging for an entire night and replugging the next morning. Ive attempted a software update and a picture reset. None of these have fixed the problem. Ive also tried rebooting the tv and that didnt work. I tried Samsung chat for them to diagnose the problem, but they just said I need a technician. Ever since dealing with Samsung, im unable to see any faint picture on the screen, just black but it is on. From everything Ive read it sounds like I need a new backlight inverter. Are you able to confirm if this is the part I need If you can still hear sound it is 8090% likely the inverter board. I often pick up free Tvs with broken screens and sell the working boards on there myself. You could try the oven trick put the board in the oven on a sheet covered with tin foil, 10 minutes at 385 degrees and let cool but it will smell horrible. How can I get rid of lines across screen It may also be due to improper video output settings that need to be set up properly. Plasma HDTV Answer questions, earn points and help others.
