Maxzis 3.0 out of 5 stars Its good for the price. Its basically a cheap web camera component powered off cells, and in a portable case. It has inaccurate ISO specs obviously.If you get the right amount of light it can make pictures that are competitive with any brand name 5MP camera. The video is suitable, and clear enough with the right light for any amateur needs. It also acts as storage, and a USB web cam. I hear it has mp3 capabilities, but Ive only found video playing features in the firmware. Its practical for video blogging.I heard nothing negative so it must have been ok. It was bought at the last minute. Not even suitable for a child! Its not the camera you want to use for big events like birthdays or holidays, because the video quality is not good enough. But its perfect for casual outings to the park, or places you may not want to take your expensive video equipment. It easily fits in my pocket, so no matter where were going, I take it along. And since it was so cheap, I dont have to worry about breaking it. I even take it close to the pool although it is NOT waterproof or water resistant. It does not give the same high quality video as my expensive miniDV tape camcorder, or my expensive Canon S2 IS digital camera, but the quality is sufficient for the price. I can take tons of video on my 512 meg SD card I calculated 45 minutes on the highest resolution, but have yet to use all of the card in one outing and then I can upload it to my childs website, or burn it onto a DVD. PROS Inexpensive. Small enough to take just about anywhere. Superlong battery life using nimh rechargeables. No tapes!! Records in easy to edit avi files. CONS Results are poor if the camera is moved around too quickly while filming. No lens cap.

Awkward handling since the lcd screen flips up rather than swinging out to the side as in a typical camcorder. Terrible in lowlight conditions. In the month that Ive owned it, Ive captured lots of memories that I would otherwise never been able to see again or share with others. I was skeptical about it when I purchased it, but this thing is a keeper! First off, you need a LOT of light when capturing video. Other not so great features Video frame rate is no better than 15fps at 320 x 240 as stated in the manual The best Ive seen in the tests Ive done so far is around 10-12fps. The camera has some nice features, though. Its compact The popup LCD screen is not bad. the builtin microphone captures sound well. If you need a small, cheap digital camera that produces average still photos, marginally useful video and good sound capture. Many other regular digital cameras in this price range have better digital camera features optical zoom, better lens and can capture short movie clips that are as good or as bad as this camera. Theyre probably a better choice. This camera fits the bill well. Using a 75 watt full spectrum light bulb as a light source it works rather well as a web cam. Its 5x7 snapshot size stills fit my needs well. My main complaints about the camera are lack of a tripod mount I purchased a tripod when I bought the camera and discovered I couldnt use it and the lack of an AC jack. I also agree with other reviews that the battery doors are flimsy and require handling with care. Pros This is a lot of functions in a very compact package at a low price. I wouldnt say its for pros, but if you want a beginners camera or just something to mess around with its well worth the price. Ive upload many videos to the internet using this camera and they turned out perfect. Ive never had any trouble with the battery compartment like others had said.

The only two downsides is you need a fair amount of light and theres no tripod mount, but its flat, so you can just sit it on top of something like I do. The battery life is pretty good also. a definite keeper. We delete comments that violate our policy, which we encourage you to read. Discussion threads can be closed at any time at our discretion.
