Instead, our system considers things like how recent a review is and if the reviewer bought the item on Amazon. It also analyzes reviews to verify trustworthiness. Still nothing. Forms for the most part do not help, only with drivers. Drivers for the board can be found on Compaqs web site. But the manual will not download. That's what is needed to hook up the front panel pins to yours

case. <https://donkorfoundation.org/userfiles/casio-230er-cash-register-manual.xml>

I even looked for other possible boards whose layout was close to the MCP61PMHM. Nothing! I did find other Compaq PCs that also had the same board in it but after looking through the manuals, not one actually shows where to plug the front panel LEDs on to the board. Why? Because Compaq does not support a user changing out their case for another. There is no money in that. For the most part RobPu, system boards share some things in common. I am posting a picture for you. Hook up your LEDs as shown. This should work for you. Pin 1 is your starting point. This is standard for ECS boards even if it's being sold by Compaq. Like I mentioned, for you it is posted upside down. Try it, I'm sure it will work for you. Enjoy! If I can help you further, feel free to post. Before doing anything please refer the motherboard manual, and as per my knowledge you need not solder any pin on the board, if you do so may be something else might not work. I better suggest you to check the Manual before doing anything. Login to post. From it all hardware components are supported. A graphics card Video Card being one. You need a graphics card that the ECS 945GCTHM, or also stated as HPs Livermore8GL6; will support. The motherboard chipset is an Intel 945GC. According to Intel came out the first quarter of 2005, the year PCI Express 1.1 technology came out. PCI Express 2.0 technology didn't come out until 2007. Will the ECS 945GCTHM support graphics cards based on the PCI Express 2.0 technology? YES! PCI Express 2.0 technology IS backward compatible, with PCI Express 1.1 technology. You just won't get the full capability of the PCI Express graphics card; based on the PCI Express 2.0 technology. Will you notice? Doubtful. From what I have seen listed in reviews on the graphics card, I would not suggest a graphics card based on the PCI Express 2.1 technology. Reviews suggest it doesn't play well with a motherboard using the PCI Express 1.1 technology.

There is another thing to consider; Power Supply. Most decent graphics cards require a minimum Power Supply wattage, of 400 to 450 Watts. This Power Supply requirement isn't just for the graphics card. Graphics card manufacturers base it on a test computer system. Before doing anything please refer the motherboard manual, and as per my knowledge you need not solder any pin on the board, if you do so may be something else might not work. I better suggest you to check the Manual before doing anything. I have searched everywhere and. Check it out, you might find just what you need! Joe Answer questions, earn points and help others.
