The MTV generation of the 1980s was the 90s watched clips captivating by creative pioneers who launched the middle. Nowadays, the artists strive to make the videos that eclipse the boundaries already divided into the hopes of attracting attention. Multiple music videos are released all the time, but only a few selected were powerful enough to spark up disputes, launching careers and resist time test. MTV celebrated its 40th anniversary on 1 August, 2021. They even created a new moon person to beat the occasion! Looking back to some of the most iconic musical videos of all time is the perfect way to participate in the fun. Michael Jackson's most iconic video is a mini-film that works for 14 monstrous minutes. The spectral show is a tribute to old horror movies mixed with the field and an unforgettable dance routine with a horde of zombies. A Michael Jackson best. Photo of courtesy: Michael Jackson / YouTube The video has made the "Thriller" an essential song for every Halloween party, and lives in via the popular "Michael Jackson who eats popcorn" GIF. It is so iconic, in fact, that it is currently the only musical video preserved in the Library of the Registry of the national films of the Congress Library. The legendary musical career of Madonna explores the complicated relationship between sex and religion, and no music videos in her career gives her better the work of her life that "like a prayer". The powerful video explored injustice in the prison system, interracial love and spirituality. Photo of courtesy: Madonna / YouTube would be a euphemism to say that the video has caused controversy. Critics greeted him for his symbolic images, but family and religious groups were horrified. Even the Vatican condemned the video of the Madonna, criticizing his "blasphemous use of Christian images". In response, Pepsi notoriously canceled his multimilionary campaign that used the song. Gambino's video P&P / Gospel is a meta interpretation to grasp the social injustices that afflicted African Americans for years. The artist intertwines perfectly through the protesters, shooting the Sprees, the brutality of the police, all the time of Svjata with a group of dancers set on the last dance moves. Photo of courtesy: Donald Glover / YouTube Internet has spent weeks watching the video, trying to decode his blink-e-miss-it symbolic images. Countless think the pieces later, the video defined the song as a modern protest anthem against gun violence, police brutality and discrimination. In 1990, George Michael was at the top of him. Musical videos of him were in heavy rotation on MTV, and the albums of him were selling all over the world. But when you arrive the time to make the video for the "freedom! '90." Michael had enough of the pop music race. Photo of courtesy: Georgemichael / YouTube was tired of the reputation pressures and wanted to take a step back from the spotlight. Instead of seeing George Michael, fans have seen supermodels Naomi Campbell, Linda Evangelista and Cindy Crawford singing him, as symbols of the burned pop legend in flames. When it comes to outrageous music videos, nobody approaches Missy Elliot. You combine surrealist images with colorful cabinets and dance routines that challenge gravity. You have a catalog of incredible choices, but the Breakout video of her, directed by Hype Williams, remains the most iconic of the rapper of all time. Photo of courtesy: Missy Elliot / YouTube in the video, Missy sported her shiny helmet eyeglasses and the leather blow-up dress, even lovingly defined as the "Bubble crash bubble". The video also filled the screen with neon landscapes, rain dancing in timberland boots and countless celebrity cams. "Single Ladies" has no costume changes, no modification set and very simple choreography. It looks like a recipe for something boring, but the lower-more approach has made that Beyonc   does not move anything short of captivating. Fans around the world have went wild over dance and many many Load your versions on YouTube for the joy of spectators. Photo of courtesy: Beyonc   / YouTube Beyonc   continued to win in the MTV Video Music Awards 2009, seeking the video door entry of the year. However, he lost the Moonman for the best female video at Taylor Swift, asking for a very drunk Kanye West to interrupt Swift during her acceptance speech on Beyonc  . Gabriel's "Sledgehammer" was a tripy tour de force. In the video, the British barbell danced the street of him through playful vignettes of Cloymation, Pixilation and Stop-Motion Animation. In reality, he had to lie under a glass sheet for 16 hours so you can film a frame at a time. Photo of courtesy: Peter Gabriel / YouTube The efforts of him paid. The video was a wonderful display of creativity, weaving through crazy seamless scenes. He continued to win Nine MTV Video Music Awards in 1987, the largest number of prizes a video ever won. This disturbing clip took place in what can be described only as a nineteenth-century doctor's office with a touch of S & M. The nine-inch nails Frontman Trent Reznor found himself with blindfolded eyes, gagged, from the wind, handcuffed And surrounded by various dismembered animals. Photo of courtesy: Nine-inch nails / youtube The video was too explicit for TV, so different scenes were blocked by a black screen that reads "missing scenes". The video was then voted the number one in a classic VH1 survey for "the largest musical videos of all time". Mon   doubled on self-love and female empowerment at the most fresh desert festival of all time. In the 2018 video for "Pynk", women were sure to be if they were A   , "and men were not necessary. The queer representation and anatomically different women's trousers were a visual breath of fresh air.
