Balanced and authoritative, and very effectively supported with informative and insightful text boxes, Politics provides a wonderfully accessible and comprehensive introduction to the subject.' - Jonathon W. Moses, Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Trondheim, Norway. 'If you want to understand what politics can do, what it can't do and how it works I can think of no better starting point. This new edition more than ever succeeds in bringing the subject to life for those coming to the subject for the first time while offering fresh insights and perspectives for all.' - Gerry Stoker, University of Southampton, UK 'I am a huge fan! This is how the subject should be taught - with full coverage of politics and government but sensitive to theoretical issues, informed by history and broader economic and social trends, and encouraging engagement with the key debates of our times. This is a great place to start putting together what is needed to become a fully-rounded political scientist.' - David Coates, Wake Forest University, USA Reviews of previous edition: 'Politics is simply the best introductory guide available for the subject. Andrew Heywood defines the theory and practice of politics in a rigorous, lively and highly accessible way. This book is indispensable for any student of politics and a "must" for introductory reading lists for politics tutors.' - Professor Jon Tonge, University of Liverpool, UK 'In addition to Heywood's accessible style of writing, the book certainly benefits from many of the pedagogical features incorporated into the text. The sets of questions, outlining of key concepts, mini biographical profiles of specific philosophers and important people, focus boxes, diagrammatic representations and suggestions for further reading are all valuable, informative features and aide-memoires.' - Dr Jacqui Briggs, Senior Lecturer in Politics, University of Lincoln, UK 'I have enjoyed using Politics and find it a font of knowledge at my finger tips.' - Dr Rae Nicholl, University of South Pacific, Fiji 'Overall, Politics offers a thorough and solid overview of the essential material for an introduction to political science or comparative politics.' - Professor Joel D. Wolfe, University of Cincinnati, USA A remarkable textbook - and even better in this enhanced and redesigned new edition! Balanced and authoritative, and very effectively supported with informative and insightful text boxes, Politics provides a wonderfully accessible and comprehensive introduction to the subject.' - Jonathon W. Politics by Andrew Heywood, 4 th edition Chapter 1- What is Politics?Defining Politics•Aristotle defined politics as the "master science" because it is the activity through which human beings attempt to improve their lives and create the Good Society•Politics in a broad sense is the activity through which people make, preserve and amend the general rules under which they live (linked to conflict and cooperation)•Politics is better seen as the search for conflict resolution than the achievement of conflict resolution because not all conflicts can be resolved•Politics is defined by two broad approaches: o1. Politics as an arena- behaviour becomes political because of where it takes place (art of gov't, public affairs)o2. Politics as a process- political behaviour is behaviour that exhibits distinctive qualities and therefore can take place in many social contexts (compromise, power)Politics as the Art of Government•Art of gov't: the exercise of control within society through the making and enforcement of collective decisions•Polis: 'city-state' (for example Athens)•In this sense, politics may be seen as anything that concerns the polis or the state (ex. People in public office)•David Easton defines politics as "the authoritative allocation of values" •Anti-politics= disillusionment with formal or established political processes which is rooted in the view of politics as self-serving and two facedPolitics as Public Affairs•Aristotle- "man is by nature a political animal"•Politics is an ethical activity concerned with creating a just society•Politics is restricted to the activities of the public sphere•Public sphere= the state, private sphere= title platonos (Edmund Burke)•Politics can also be viewed within seemingly 'private' institutions like the workplace and even the home•Hannah Arendt: 'politics is the most important form of human activity because it involves interaction amongst free and equal citizens; thus giving meaning to lie and affirms the uniqueness of each individual' (similar conclusions by Mill and Rousseau)•Liberals feel that public activity and politics is unwanted because it prevents people from acting as they choosePolitics as Compromise and Consensus•Political solutions to problems imply consensus through peaceful debate •Politics is that solution that chooses conciliation rather than violence and coercion" •Crick•This view is based on liberal-rationalists who put great faith in the efficiency of debate Politics as Power••This view sees politics at work in all realms of social activity and every level of social interaction (families, friends, nations)•Politics can be seen as a struggle over scarce resources and power can be seen as the means through which this struggle is conducted•Advocates of this view include Feminists and Marxists and portray politics quite negatively (politics as centered around oppression)Studying Politics•A variety of approaches has been adopted in the study of politics as an academic disciplineThe Philosophical Tradition•Normative approach•Attempts to describe the ideal society through questions of what 'ought', 'should', or 'must' be brought about•The traditional approach= the analytical study of ideas and doctrines
