These are not all game songs, presumably missing songs have been composed in-house at Behemoth, possibly from Dan Paladin. I set Dan Paladin as a release artist, as he seems to have been the audio director for the game. Some of the above hypotheses are polite, if anyone has more specific or more reliable information on this release, please update this annotation. Each of the tracks has a very short description in new fields, these do not seem to be part of the title so that they are not included in the tracklisting below, here are instead: 01. Four Brave Champions - Intro music and winner of the DC music competition! 02. Castle Crushers Menu Loop - The arena battle menu. 03. Castle Crushers Barracks - Party music from the barracks! 04. factory - boss fighting, including barbaric boss. 05. Jumper - the entrance to the forest. 06. Spatial pirates - the forest. 07. Techock - The abandoned mill tracking. 08. Rage of the Champions - Tall grass field. 09. Waterfall - Le Grotte. 10. Dark ability - The flowery field. 11. Vain Star - The Roccaforte del Cyclopo. 12. Chaoz Japan - battle on the seas open. 13. Not ... the desert. 14. Swampland - La Marsh. 15. Winterbliss - snow world. 16. The show - Capo Painter. 17. Simple view - Necromancer Battaglia. 18. Spanish waltz - shops. 19. Helix - Archetype - The battle music vs. 20. Second thought - Chief Wars. 21. Tricky's song - How about this? 22. Color Coded Killers - The Castle Crushers Rap. Classic TeeClassic Long Sleeve Teeclassic Pullover HoodiSticker - PortraitSelect Size: SMLXL2XL3XL4XL5XL I am a fairly large fan of Castle Crushers (probably because there are some trails from this blog ...) and when I was looking for a zombie track to put up, I realized that A) I had already used the music from Warcraft III (EB) I have not familiar with the soundtrack resident evil (I still don't have the soundtrack of zombiasmash ... maybe ... FL if it was in). However, à € orWamplandà € from Castle Crushers is a nice theme of zombie invasion to adapt to this period of the year. Castle Crushers soundtrack was very interesting as the greatest songs were already written by artists on Newgrounds. The Norwegian composer's watermelon has contributed to several pieces, including "Space Pirates", the theme of the forest, but I think this is the theme of the forest, piece that contributed. The other interesting thing is that the tracks don't work very well in the game, as they contain a very short (but noticeable) audio break (which I think could have been easily remedied by deleting half a second of silence at the end of each track). However, the version uploaded here is actually a loop version of the original (which you can find on the Newgrounds page of Waterflame). Castle Crushers "Swampland" is the kind of gloomy, oppressive stuff you'd expect to find in a zombie hideout. A deep and moaning stretch of arches opens the track, on which an obsessive piano music-box and atmospheric percussions from snake rattles and scratches of cymbals are quickly stratified. The track just seems to exude fog and creatures of the dark places. Each instrument adds another layer to the track until a minute later, when the exotic beat of the bongo rises from the boiling mud like the undead's wobbly feet, until it reaches a singing pitch for the last 30 seconds. Great stuff to fight zombies by mixing and black knights. Did I tell you this game is awesome? Castle Crushers has such a fantastic soundtrack, it deserves more than a Daily. Today it is one of those that you probably will not have heard very often, the theme à À|Sand Castleâ À| by master-composer Will Stamper (Gish, Closure). Castle Crushers "Sand Castle" (Will Stamper) "Sand Castle" is the theme of the stage of the "well" of the sand castle. The Moors built a sand castle in their desert (apparently using plastic toy shovels) and the Crusader knights had to take the fortress to reclaim the princesses. Beware of the Giant Warriors if you do not have a good remote attack, it will do you some serious damage! Anyway, the theme is rather relaxing and trance, with a great sound of drums and percussion accompanied by an atmosphere of guitars and synth line that floods the room with a cascade of sounds. It comes straight from the desert to your audio system. A nice rhythm of percussion and the song is a bit fresher than the external theme of the desert (À€EdonÀ€EIA€EIA€E) as it is located inside a building and although it is not very melodic (more based on the tone), it is E.E.E.E It's a wonderfully engaging piece. By the way, most of the Castle Crushers soundtrack (except Will Stamper's work) can be downloaded through the Castle Crushers portal. "Dark Skies", "Vain Star" and "Rage of the Champions" are three of the best. I don't know why Stamper's work hasn't been released yet, but it's a shame considering how good and popular the game has been. Javascript is disabled in your browser.
